

Smog Pesteters Old Pueblo

TUCSON (UPI) — The smog which blanketed Tucson Wednesday gave the city its worst case of air pollution in two years.

University of Arizona Scientist James E. McDonald said the smog was worst just before noon when it cut visibility to about three miles. Normal visibility is from 50 to 100 miles. The smog thinned out later but it still hung on at night when street lights were producing a misty glow in the air around them.

McDonald said factors that might be contributing to the situation were automobile exhausts, asphalt mixing plants, jet aircraft and smelters.
