

Liberal Arts Staff Keeps Pens Busy

Staff members of the Liberal Arts College at the University of Arizona turned out 355 publications during the past year.

The list of published work from July 1, 1962 through May 1, 1963 included 32 books and 323 articles and reviews, said Dr. Frances A. Roy, the Liberal Arts College dean.

Among those who wrote the most individual pieces of work were Dr. James E. McDonald, senior physicist in the Institute of Atmospheric Physics, who produced 13 articles and five reviews.

Dr. Richard B. Woodbury, associate professor of anthropology, wrote five articles and 13 reviews. And Dr. Henry Freiser, chemistry department head, was co-author of 15 articles.

Dr. Louis J. Battan, associate director of the Institute of Atmospheric Physics, published two books during the year. Four of his earlier books were published in England, Germany and Sweden.
